What is a Collectors' Guide?

The Imperial Guard Collectors' Guide is the definitive tome for anyone interested in the Imperial Guard miniatures range. It's ideal for anyone who collects Imperial Guard, containing the full range of Imperial Guard models and their component parts.

We've laid the range out following the codex, grouping models as to where they appear in the army lists. All the HQ choices are therefore in one section, followed by Elites, Troops, Fast Attack and Heavy Support units. We have also featured a section of Necromunda models, as they can be used as Planetary Defence Forces or as the basis for Guard conversions. We hope this will make it easier for you to navigate through and find the models or components you seek.

The Imperial Guard Collectors' Guide is far more than a simple catalogue. It also includes a number of other features, such as painted examples of Imperial Guard regimental colour schemes, some fantastic armies, conversions, Golden Demon winners and great dioramas.

So if you collect, paint or game with Imperial Guard then this is the book for you!

Anyway, what are you waiting for, stop reading this and take a look inside.

When you reach the Components section, you will find that some of the models are classed as Classic Range.

Classic Range Models

These include the PRAETORIAN TROOPER 3 (pictured left) or the DESERT RAIDER 6 (pictured right). This denotes any models which are no longer available in stores but are still suitable for use in your army either as they are or as a basis for conversion.

Don't worry, all the Classic Range Models will be clearly labelled inside.

Ordering any of these models is simple and convenient. All you have to do is select your models from this book then use any of the following ordering methods below:

COLOURS OF THE GUARD

In this section, we show you the colour schemes, home planets and pertinent information on the most famous Guard regiments, along with some suggested conversions to personalise your own regiments.

CADIAN SHOCK TROOPS

Cadia has always been a fortress world, charged with guarding the entrance to the Eye of Terror. Its population are all destined for a military life; the birth rate and recruitment rate are synonymous. Cadian Regiments are highly disciplined, make excellent shots and use elite shock troops to lead their attacks. Such is the reputation of the Cadian Shock Troops that many other regiments mimic their appearance, although their doctrines may differ.

Preferred heavy weapon: Autocannon

MORDIAN IRON GUARD

The Mordian Iron Guard are superbly drilled and accoutred soldiers from a world bathed in perpetual night and cursed with the attentions of Chaos. In battle the Iron Guard present a solid wall of brightly-uniformed, perfectly formed troops to the enemy, cutting them down with precisely timed volleys from behind a hedge of bayonet points. Some enemies of the Emperor have been misled by the Mordians' elaborate and ornate uniforms to believe they were facing amateurs, only to find the bright uniforms contain tough, determined soldiers.

Preferred heavy weapon: Lascannon

TALLARN DESERT RAIDERS

The Tallarn are mobile guerrilla fighters, evasive and opportunistic. They are especially well-known for their hard-fighting Sentinel squadrons and are masters of hit-and-run warfare. Tallarn are all accomplished riders—often they will use riding mounts to move from battle to battle, dismounting only when they are close to the enemy and wish to employ stealth. Once the enemy are sighted the Tallarn will stalk them relying on their practiced marksmanship and lightning-quick curved knives to achieve victory.

Preferred heavy weapon: Missile Launcher

HARAKONI WARHAWKS

Harakon is a low gravity world with towering hives whose spires reach into the upper atmosphere. The Harakoni use grav-gliders to hunt Vapourwyms in the mountain passes below, making them fearless of altitude and expert at judging air currents. These skills are put to good use by the Imperial Guard and many Warmasters owe their laurels to the courage of the Harakoni Warhawks.

VALHALLAN ICE WARRIORS

From their earliest victories against the Orks on Valhalla, the Ice Warriors have a reputation for stoicism and dedication to the Emperor. Regiments raised in the frozen hive cities of Valhalla have a formidable reputation for unwavering courage when on the defensive. Normally the only way to capture ground held by Valhallans is by wiping them out. When attacking, they combine massed artillery barrages with infantry wave assaults.

- Preferred special weapon: Flamer
- Preferred heavy weapon: Mortar

ARMAGEDDON STEEL LEGION

The Steel Legions are renowned for their skill in opposing the Orks on the great ash wastes of their native world. Fully mobile in their Chimera transports, they are able to launch rapid attacks in which the Chimeras overrun the enemy lines before the Steel Legion infantry dismount to finish them off. Fighting in proximity to the great Hives of Armageddon, the Steel Legions are sometimes supported by hive militia conscripts eager to join their ranks.

CATACHAN JUNGLE FIGHTERS

The planet Catachan is a deathworld in which the climate, animal life and plant life is all inimical to Humanity. On Catachan, daily survival requires skill and courage undreamt of on other worlds. It is not surprising therefore that the men forming the Catachan Regiments are tough, resourceful and uncompromising warriors, deadly up close with their wicked knives or from ambush with their lasguns. In jungle terrain they are unsurpassed, with each Catachan being worth ten of any other regiment.

- Preferred special weapon: Flamer
- Preferred heavy weapon: Heavy Bolter

TANITH FIRST AND ONLY

The Tanith homeworld was destroyed shortly after the regiment was founded, leaving them orphaned. They carry with them the wilderness skills learned on their homeworld that make them superb light infantry. Led by the inspirational Colonel-Commissar Gaunt, and drawing new recruits from the worlds they fight to defend, their reputation continues to grow with each victory.

DEATH KORPS OF KREIG

Kreig was laid to waste when rebellion led to a 500 year campaign of atomic purging. The Death Korps now seek to make amends for their earlier heresy by martyring themselves to the Imperial cause. The Death Korps fight without fear of death, disdaining retreat and surrender. They excel in grinding their enemies down in battles of attrition, making extensive use of razorwire and entrenchment.

Preferred special weapon: Meltagun
Preferred heavy weapon: Heavy Bolter

Data ref: D24 LII E74

SAVLAR CHEM DOGS

Scavengers and criminals from the dregs of Imperial society, the Savlar were pressed into service to fight in the Third War for Armageddon. Motivated by the right to keep what they looted and the threat of return to Savlar, they excelled in the cramped, noxious hive battlefields. In many ways the Savlar would only be tolerated in a war zone like Armageddon - much of their equipment is stolen from other regiments and much of their courage comes from the use of nitro-chem inhalers.

Preferred heavy weapon: Heavy Bolter

TERRAX GUARD

Terrax is the site of a major Schola Progenium facility, the Schola Excubitos. The Schola Progenium train many Imperial agents for war, notably Storm Troopers and Commissars, and their methods are rigorous and effective. The tithed regiments raised on Terrax have been trained under the auspices of the Scholae Excubitos and are truly moulded in its image almost as an entire regiment of Commissars.

Preferred special weapon: Meltagun
Preferred heavy weapon: Lascannon

KANAK SKULL-TAKERS

The volcano-racked world of Kanak is home to many fierce barbarian tribes, some of which are closer to Ogryn than human. Their talent for slaughter soon found a home in the Imperial Guard, where considerable tolerance for the feral tactics of the Kanak has been displayed. Like many feral regiments, service in the Imperial Guard is intended to teach them Imperial ways so that if they ever return to their homeland they will be a civilising influence.

COLOURS OF THE GUARD - OTHER REGIMENTS

This conversion uses Cadian, Catachan and Warhammer Militia sprues.

The simple addition of Green Stuff and some plastic Warhammer components make this aztec-looking Guardsman.

Converted using a Cadian Shock Trooper and a Warhammer Militia figure, the crowning glory of this model is its hat, made from the plastic cover on a paint brush!

This brutal Guardsman was a Catachan Jungle fighter. The armour was made with green stuff and the banner pole features Kroot quills!

This arabian-looking Guardsman was converted from a High Elf archer and a Guardsman laspistol.

A Cawdor Ganger from the Necromunda range (see pages 89-95) was given a Heavy backpack which was augmented by wire and a Kroot Long Rifle.

A Cadian Shock Trooper, Vehicle components and Green Stuff make up this Guardsman

This barbaric Guardsman is from a feral world. It is made by simply adding Catachan arms and accessories to a Mordheim Pit Gladiator.

COLOURS OF THE GUARD – OTHER REGIMENTS

Your regimental look need not be limited to merely the foot soldiers. Here we show you that you can easily carry on a look of uniformity to your Rough Riders.

A Death Rider of Kreig using Steel Legion model for the body and a Bretonnian horse head for the gas mask.

A beast rider, using such eclectic components as a Desert Raider, a Classic Dark Elf Cold One and some Kroot legs!

This Rough Rider uses a Necromunda Ratskin. By simply bending the legs on the model, we were able to fit it on a horse.

CONVERSIONS

No army in Warhammer 40,000 glorifies the simple armoured vehicle as much as the Imperial Guard. The fighting men and women of the Emperors' armies back up millions of footsloggers with some of the finest artillery pieces ever sculpted. However, one of the drawbacks to heavily converting an Imperial Guard army is the sheer number of infantry you need to paint. This means that most players concentrate on their beloved tanks for conversion. However, that doesn't mean there aren't some out there crazy enough to convert their infantry as well! On the following pages we show you a sample of the wealth of Imperial Guard conversions hatched by our staff and other hobbyists.

Guy took his inspiration from WWII vehicles and the earthshaker gun itself. He also includes this tip on imagery: "Look at photos of real tanks for reference. The thing that really looks nice is simple little touches, like ammo feeds and rigging and the like."

To get areas of worn paint and battle damage, he simply paints metal underneath the colours.

DIORAMAS

The definition of 'diorama' is "a three-dimensional scene with figures" and Golden Demon has been inundated with a barrage of Imperial Guard-themed pieces. Something about the 'grim & gritty' nature of Imperial Guard conflicts, tied with the dozens of different troop types available, make this a prime subject for dioramas. Here we present some of the best Imperial Guard scenes committed to metal and Green Stuff!

BAZ STEVENS' VALHALLANS

Baz Stevens works at the Romford Store and has constructed this fine Valhallas army over the past few years.

Following the time honoured tactic of an Infantry platoon backed up by an Armoured Fist squad, I have filled out my foot troops with the inclusion of a Storm Trooper squad. Fast moving support is provided by a Hellhound and a Sentinel sporting a Lascannon and the army is rounded out by heavy artillery in the form of a Leman Russ battle tank and a Griffon mortar.

I can't pick out any particular model as being my favourite, but I think the total uniformity of my army is my 'favourite' thing. The sharp contrasting black and grey lines really make it stand out on the table.

With the release of the new Codex: Imperial Guard, I hope to further refine my army, possibly adding more Sentinels and another tank. Of course, being Imperial Guard, it's probably going to include many more troopers!

Baz's Commander, based on the Captain Chenkov model.

Two of Baz's sinister Commissars.

Fast moving support is provided by this lascannon-armed Sentinel.

The epitome of Imperial Guard armies are the tanks, and Baz's Leman Russ benefits from a striking colour scheme.

DAVE TAYLORS' 13TH PENAL LEGION

A converted Colonel Schaeffer and Kage feature in Dave's painstakingly detailed Hardened Veterans squad.

There are literally thousands of ideas for personalising an Imperial Guard army and one of the first places to start mining these ideas is our Black Library novels. The legend of Colonel Schaeffer and his Last Chancers has been around for some time, but the protagonists were really brought to life in Gav Thorpe's novel 13th Legion.

As soon as I'd read the story I knew that an army was in the offing, but where to start? Usually I start with my Troops choices, but this time I went straight to a Hardened Veteran squad, lead by Lieutenant Kage. The rest of the squad consists of the handful of characters that accompany Kage on the story's final foray into an 'enemy' stronghold. This squad equips itself with all manner of exotic weaponry and grenades, something easily reproducible in the guise of a Hardened Veteran unit.

From there the rest of the army began to flesh itself out. I decided on a no tank policy (I mean who'd let a prisoner drive a tank?), and lots of troops. Two platoons of Penal troopers armed with flamers and meltaguns would do the trick, giving me both anti-tank and anti-personnel capabilities in my infantry. My Troops choices were rounded out with a platoon of injured Mordian Iron Guard (Kage encounters these guys while trying to escape and ends up leading them to safety. To replicate the effects of Colonel Schaeffer's fierce discipline I added a vox-caster to every squad, I was determined these scum would not run.

For a bit of fire support I added two squadrons of Sentinels. The first is armed with heavy flamers (to keep the unruly Penal troopers in line), the second with multi-lasers for some longer range support. For ranged anti-tank fire I added a lascannon squad to the Command HQ platoon.

The last thing that remained was to kit out my Command HQ. Colonel Schaeffer is accompanied by a vox-caster and a heavy bolter team. In certain scenarios Inquisitor Oriel accompanies them into battle.

As this army was written with the old Codex, I haven't re-written the list yet to take advantage of the great new rules for Schaeffer, Kage, the Last Chancers, AND the Regimental Doctrines, but I'm sure I'm going to be having a lot of fun with this army for some time to come!

Yet more examples of Dave's characterful models.

Even the Heavy Weapons squad is rife with conversions.

PAUL HANDLEY'S KALLISTAN XVIIITH

Paul: I've always liked the idea of an Imperial Guard army ever since the Catachan models were released. The idea of masses of troops running across the battlefield to engage the enemy reminded me of those classic war films like Platoon. The idea was an army stuck in a war of attrition.

So my troops are a mix of Cadian and Catachan figures to represent the armoured troops that are freshly shipped in to take part in the conflict, and the old dogs who have seen it all before.

I took the Doctrines of the 'light Infantry' and 'Hardened' to represent their skills and ability to up and move – a regiment that is never pinned down and takes the fight to the enemy. This is why all my Heavy Weapons Teams have stripped the weapons off the carriages and carry them, and that all my Veteran officers carry any extra equipment on their backs, they know what they need to get by out in the battlezone!

My centrepiece in the army is my 'King Russ'. I decided to put double

The 'King Russ' tank. As well as utilising a Forge World turret, Paul has put to good use the new Vehicle Accessory sprue, exhausts made from the original Leman Russ cannon barrel and the simple technique of doubling the tracks. These conversions create a tank that looks about twice as big as its fellows!

the width of tracks one one tank to make it really big and used the Vanquisher from Forge World.

Having the Doctrine of Independent Commissars gave me the option of making 3 really different looking models. I have one based on the Underhive Scum model with the two bolt pistols. This one is the gritty commissar who leads my Hardened Veterans into battle, the sort of guy who would stare death in the face and come back for more. The second is the official representative of the Administratum, the commissar who follows the book and deals out the judgement. She is based on the Dark Elf sorceress model and a lot of green stuff!

My regiment has racked up a lot of victories during its campaign, but I think that it's time to have the Hand of the Inquisition to support them and add in some Daemonhunters.

Paul's heavily converted Colonel comprises many different metal and plastic Catachan components.

This female Commissar was originally a Dark Elf Sorceress, but the inclusion of a Space Marine power sword and a lot of Green Stuff changed all that!

A nice touch on this Veteran Sergeant is the Eldar power sword. Paul thought it would be very characterful if the Sergeant actually armed himself with the weapon of his foe.

Paul's Heavy Weapons teams borrow heavily from the Necromunda Heavy models, using both Goliath and Orlock models and a simple head swap.

MIKE PYES' 24TH GRENADIERS

Two of Mike's extensively converted Command Squad.

Mike: My reason for choosing this army was due to the fact I am a fan of the fancy military uniforms and big parades, and what better army to do, with that in mind, than Imperial Guard. My main concern was that I didn't want it to look like a standard, run-of-the-mill Guard army, so I decided to base my army around the British Grenadier Guard.

The 24th Grenadier Guard are the personal house guard to Lord Jerome A. Vicore. They are never seen outside of their dress uniforms and command the utmost respect for their determination and efficiency when called to serve their patron and the Emperor. Due to their specific roles as house guard the Grenadiers only maintain a small amount of armoured support and generally rely on close quarter weaponry and standard heavy weapons.

With this in mind I devised a troops-heavy force, using either the Mordian or Praetorian models as their designs best suited dress-style military uniforms. I based my tactics around a good solid base of infantry with the ability to dish out large amounts of firepower.

I made sure most of the officers stood out from my basic rank and file. As for my general, well, I didn't want to use a standard model so I racked my brains and decided to use Vet. Sergeant Namaan's body with a few alterations to his head and body.

Even Mikes' standard troops all bear signs of conversion as you can see.

GOLDEN DEMON WINNERS

Over the years, the Golden Demon competition has attracted some of the best miniatures painters in the world. The image of the war-torn men and women of the Imperial Guard battling against near-impossible odds has inspired many an entrant to base their ideas on this. We would probably need another book just to show all these models, so on the next two pages, we treat you to just a few of the best from all around the world. We hope this section shows you that, even when faced with scores and scores of Guardsmen to paint, you can still turn out some real show-pieces.
